active part in the proceedings of the body. In 1848 he received permanent license to practice law, and soon obtained a respectable business. In 1852 he was chosen judge of the Ninth Judicial district of Texas for the term of six years, but in 1856 he resigned that position only to be re-elected for another term of six years. In 1857 Mr. Reagan was elected to the United States Congress, defeating the Know-Nothing or American candidate, who was the sitting member, by a large majority. In 1859 he was re-elected to Congress. Before this last election he had taken grounds against fillbustering and the opening of the African slave trade. He was denounced by politicians and newspapers with great bitterness in consequence of his attitude on these questions, but mot the issue squarely in a vigorous canvass before the people, and to the surprise of many, was elected by an overwhelming majority.

This brought him into the midst of the fierce controversies of the four years immediately preceding the Civil War of 1861-65. He recognized that there was a moral question behind the anti-slavery agitution, aithough he felt that it was urged largely for political effect in election; and in the manner in which it was conducted, and with reference to its antecedent facts, it was, in his opinion, cruelly unjust and full of danger; especially in view of the fact that African slavery had been planted in this country by the mother country and by other leading civilized powers of Europe—that it existed in all the American colonies at the date of the Declaration of Independence, and in twelve of the original thirteen States at the date of the origin State and people

Member of Cabinet.

Melliott.

Mr. Reagan was chosen a member of what is known as the Secession Convontions, Kaufman and Van Zandt counties, and during the time participated in several campaigns against the hostile Indians, did farm work, made rails, drove oxen, and a little later was private teacher for the children of a friend.

Pioneer Settler.

In the fall of 1844 he became one of the ploneer settlers in the present Kaufman county, having in the meantime been captain of a militia company in active service and justice of the peace. He had also a small farm, horses and cattle, and commenced reading law in 1845. In 1846 he received temporary ilcense to practice law. In 1847 he was elected to the Legislature of Texas, was placed on the committees of judiciary. taken first to Hampton Roads, va., and then to Fort Warren, in Boston harbor, Mass., where he was detained until released by order of President Johnson III October, 1855.

While in confinement he wrote to the people of Texas what is extensively known as his "Fort Warren letter." Its object was to advise the people of that State, that it would be best for them to accept, without unreasonable delay the inevitable results of the war, so as to avoid military government and the danger of universal negro suffrage. But on his return to Texas he found the people unprepared to accept its policy, and his fidelity to his section was doubted for having written it. Seeing that any effort in that direction was at that time useless, he withdrew to his farm near Palestine, Tex., hired some hands, and went to work in the field with them. After working on his farm until business became more settled, he returned to the practice of the law, keeping up my farming interest, and had a lucrative practice until 1874, when he was elected to Congress.

DAKOTA BOND BILL PASSED

Senate Voted Down House Bill for a Textile School at Spray.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
RALEIGH, N. C., March 6,-The Genral Assembly came to a close to-day at 1:45 o'clock. The hourt of noon was set, order to finish the business,

A legislative committee, consisting of Senator Zollicoffer and Representatives Graham and Redwine was appointed to complete the editing and publication of the Code revisal.

The Senate passed the South Dakots and Shaffer bond bill, carrying $250,000 and it was duly ratified. They voted down the House will to appropriate five thou-sand dollars for a textile school at Spray Reckingham county.
FOR JAMESTOWN.

FOR JAMISTOWN.

One of the last nots of the Assembly before adjournment sine die was the ratification of a bill appropriating $30,000 for the State, to be represented at the Jamestown Expesition. The bill had passed the Senate, carrying a $50,000 appropriation, but opposition in the House necessitated and the state of a second passes that the service of a a out to $30,000, also the insertion of a clause conditioning the appropriation on the appropriation by the United States government of at least one million doliars.

Up to the very last hour it seemed that the Jamestown bill was doomed to defeat, for it was supposed that practically all legislation was at an end Saturday night, when the amended bill was sent back to the House from the Senate with the expectation that it would there be again referred to the Appropriations Committee, which would pigean-hole it on the pro-referred to the Appropriations Committee, which would pigeon-hole it on the protense of awaiting the action of Congress on a million dollar appropriation.

GOOD WORK.

However, Captain Bennehan Cameron and other friends of the bill, didn't give up hope, but went to work with renawed energy. Sunday morning the Raleigh Post had an article on the subject, reproduced from The Times-Dispatch, and a strong editorial of its own, urging the appropriation.

propriation.

Governor Glenn had already approved the measure in a special message, and Lieutenant-Governor Winston and Speaker Guion were in favor of 4t. This and other pressure was brought to bear during Sunday, and this morning when the bill came before the House, strong speeches in favor of its immediate passage were made by Murphy, of Rowan; Biggs, of Durham; Austin, of Nash; Cunningham, of Person; Winburne, of Hertford; Powers, of Rutherford; Laughinghouse, of Pitt, and Warburton, of Richmond.

Midor A. W. Graham, of Granville, the author of the House bill, was detained from his seat by liness, and could not speak in its advocacy. The House voted down the resolution to refer and passed the bill as it came from the Senate.

Thus North Carolina became the first State to substantially endorse and come to the laid of the Jamestown Ter-Contenary Exposition. Governor Glenn had already approved to the aid of the Jamesowi tenary fixposition.

The $$\frac{30}{000}$ thus appropriated insures a North Carolina building and exhibit, and the $$20,000 more, necessary to properly supply the same, will surely come by act of the next Legislature.

(By Associated Press.)
HOUSTON, TEX., March 6.—Judge John H. Rengah, sole surviving member of the Confederate Cabinet, died to-day at Palestine, Texas, of pneumonia.

Judge Reagan, who was eighty-six years old, had been in failing health for a year or more. He was in this city Thursday transacting business. When he re-turned home the family physician was pain in the lungs. On Saturday pneu-pain in the lungs. On Satural place monla set in, and Judge Rengan grew rapidly worse. Gathered in the death chamber were his wife and daughters and W. Greenwood, his son-in-law.

Hundreds of telegrams of condolence are being received from all parts of the United States. The funeral will take place at Palestine Wednesday atternoon.

John Henninger Reagan, senator, was born in Sevier county, Tenn., October 8, 1818. The four ancestral branches of his family were Irish, English, Welsh and German, and they all came across the Atlantic before the American Revolutionary War. Timothy Reagan, one of his great-grandfathers, served in the Continental army during the Revolution, and was severely wounded in the battle of Brandywine. One of his grandfathers served as a surgeon in the Pennsylvania line in the Revolutionary army.

The parents of John H. Reagan were very poor in this world's goods. In his youth his time was divided between assisting his father in a tanyard and in going to school until he was about fifteen or sixteen years old, when he was given permission to obtain his own education. He commenced by working on a few few few few and the few few few and the commenced of the commence of the comme John Henninger Reagan, senator, was given permission to obtain his own education. He commenced by working on a farm for $0 a month. Then, entering an academic school, he paid for his board by working mornings, evenings and Saturdays. A friend gave him the management of an extensive set of flouring and sawmills, thereby enabling him to raise money to attend college at Maryville, Tenn, where he remained for something over a year. For a few months after leaving college he sold goods at a country store, then he went South, where he was lold that he could get better wages as a clerk or school teacher and be enabled sooner to return to college and graduate.

Went to Texas.

Went to Texas.

He was offered favorable inducements to proceed to Texas and sell goods for a gentleman there. The project ended in disappointment, but it landed him in Texas, albeit without money or friends. When he reached Nacogdoches, in that republic, war impended between the Cherokees and other Indian tribes and the people of Texas. He joined the Texan army, intending at the close of the campaign to return to the United States, He was in the battles of the 15th and 18th of July, 1839, and behaved so gallantly that on the morning after the second battle General Albert Sidney Johnston, then Secretary of War for Texas, and Acting President Burnet requested his presence at headquarters and tendered him an appointment as junior second fleutenant in the regular army. He declined the appointment, however, devoting himself to the study of surveying.

In the spring he was appointed deputy surveyar of the public lands and did some work as such in what is now Angolina county. In December, 1839, he started out with one of the first surveying parties that reached the Upper Trinity country, then only known by Indian aclina county. In December, 1839, he started out with one of the first surveying parties that reached the Upper Trinity country, then only known by Indian accounts. The country was occupied by hostille tribes, but was described as beautiful and fertile. Near is what is known as Jordan's Saline, in Van Zandt county, his company encountered Indians. In the melee that followined one of Reagan's men also was slightly wounded, but his company succeeded in capturing eight horses and their packs, Heavy rains set in, the streams became swollen, the men got discouraged, and all except himself and five others returned to the settlements. These six continued westward to the waters of the Trinity, making a number of surveys in what is known as Cedar Creek, in the present counties of Kaufman and Van Zandt. Within the next two or three years Mr. Reagan did a great deal of surveying in what is now Nacogdoches. Houston, Anderson, Henderson, Kaufman and Van Zandt counties and during the time participated in several campaigns against the hostile Innerson, Kautman and Van Zandt coun-ties, and during the time participated in several campaigns against the hostile In-dians, did farm work, made rails, drove oxen, and a little later was private teach-er for the children of a friend.
